Check the guide linked above for the strengths and drawbacks of each of these methods as well as observing the size restrictions FW plexes impose. In both cases keeping an eye on local is essential. Even if you only pick up one target on D-scan be mindful of local. If the inhabitants belong to the same corp, alliance or even militia, there's a good chance they'll help each other.

The Alphas Guide is definitely a great place to start. Once you're past that, and if you haven't found a good newbro friendly corp you want toto join yet, I would recommend going through the Eve Uni Wiki which has really good starter guides for pretty much any part of Eve you might be interested in. Also, the rookie help channels are garbage and would recommend joining the Eve Uni chat channel.

Solo Pvp - EVE University Wiki

The Rifter Guide: Solo Pvp The Rifter is the workhorse of the Minmatar fleet and probably the toughest frigate in Eve. It's the ideal ship for the rookie Pvp pilot to learn his or her trade in and hopefully this guide will go some way to getting you out in your Rifter and looking for targets.

Eve Online Newbie Guide - First 2 Weeks [Dec 2012]

CONSIDER COST! As you are new at pvp, and are working on solo pvp, and are just generally new, I really recommend not using your most expensive fit you can possibly put together. You are GOING TO LOSE IT. Get a cheap frigate, and hunt down things that you can chew on. Start down low and go from there.

General PVP, including friendlies - My standard overview setup for solo and small gang PVP. It includes all ships as well as gates/stations for ease of navigation. POS force fields are also included so that I can quickly identify whether a ship on d-scan is POSed without needing to change to my scanning overview (this works better than using control towers since it takes out offline POSes).

I also joined EVE because of the Pvp and someone told me to join FW. I didn't know anything about FW or EVE Pvp at all when I joined. someone mailed me (in game) some sites to look at explaining overviews, d-scan, rifter drifter guide (which is good to read even if you don't start out with rifter), and some basic FW things such as complexes and how they work etc.

This is a basic guide, that should give you a good set of recommendations on what skills to train for in your first weeks or so of EVE. Treat it as a checklist -- if something's listed here, and you don't have it, consider training it, in roughly the priority listed. NOTE: Please see Importing Skillplans for a guide on using these skill plans.
