A "look at" matrix is supposed to rotate you so your old (x,y,z) coordinate axes become aligned with a new set of coordinate axes $(newx, newy, newz)$. Basically a change of basis. Working in an LH coordinate system, using row major matrices, according to this document, this rotation matrix should be constructed as:

Change of Basis In many applications, we may need to switch between two or more different bases for a vector space. So it would be helpful to have formulas for converting the components of a vector with respect to one basis into the corresponding components of the vector (or matrix of the operator) with respect to the other basis.

Author Alfred Pischinger was the first scientist to develop a theory for complementary (holistic) medicine based on the regulation of the extracellular matrix (ground regulation). He was born in Linz, Austria in 1899 and died in 1983 in Graz.
