The end of the world might be right around the corner. I figure with everybody in a hysterical frenzy these days about the end of the world, hurricanes and wildfires and earthquakes, governments spending money like it's Monopoly money, and my years-long obsession with becoming a real life Jason Bourne (seriously), I figured this would be a good time to share everything I've stumbled across ...

A bridging loan is normally around the £50 mark (paid weekly until your cash appears) so will only be suitable for costs like feeding yourself or paying bills, and won't be enough to cover rent. To arrange your bridging loan, contact your university's student advice service and bring along a bank statement (you might have to go into a branch to get an up-to-date one) to prove your loan hasn't ...
