Towards a General Theory of Translational Action
The first part of the book was written by Vermeer and explains the theoretical foundations and basic principles of skopos theory as a general theory of translation and interpreting or 'translational action', whereas the second part, penned by Katharina Reiss, seeks to integrate her text-typological approach, first presented in 1971, as a 'specific theory' that focuses on those cases in which ...

The claim of a general theory is one that invites hubris, and the claim that this work is on a journey towards a general theory only reduces this prospect a little. However, implementation science is a field where interest in developing and testing new theories and theory-informed evaluation and planning frameworks is exploding.

Towards a general theory of implementation
This chapter discusses the general theory of social control. It presents social control as a natural phenomenon that varies with its location and direction in social space. It is possible, in principle, to develop a body of sociological theory that will predict and explain how normative life differs from one setting to another or, in other words, to understand social control as a dependent ...
